

The Senior Resource Association (SRA) is invested in helping families to plan and manage the complexities of senior living.

Families today can become overwhelmed when major decisions need to be made for the senior in their lives. The Senior Resource Association can help with this burden by providing professional expertise and guidance. Each member has dedicated themselves to helping elders that need care and advice.

The group was formed to provide plausible answers to the complex issues confronting senior's retirement. Each member was invited to join based upon their relevant field of expertise and their personal and proven commitment to assisting the senior population in our community.

The Senior Resource Association was formed in 2004 when Tabitha Tripp, Owner of Tender Hearts Home Health Care, and other like-minded professionals met at a health fair and quickly developed trustworthy, professional relationships. This bond led to the determination that there was a great need for competent and reliable information from knowledgeable resources that seniors and caregivers could utilize. Thus, the concept of forming a group of similar minded professionals to provide plausible answers to the complex issues confronting seniors in the south coast community was created.

Dan Surprenant, an elder law attorney states, "I know that I provide only one piece in the puzzle of issues that senior clients may be facing. I can see the importance of having strong relationships with other professionals in the community that are able to fill those needs. That to me is what the SRA is all about!"

Marie Cashman, Owner of Weichert, Realtors—Neves & Cashman Realty say's, "I have always been passionate about helping seniors. With the many complex issues facing seniors today, it's vital to have a group of like-minded professionals to help guide them, and that's exactly what the Senior Resource Association (SRA) does."
